A Warning

While his brother was holding a shotgun in his hands, Alexander Snider, aged fifteen years, was shot and instantly killed on Friday last at his father's homestead at Minisiti Lake.

The two boys had got the gun from the wall with the intention of shooting at a chicken hawk, and one of them "broke" it, and was about to peer down the barrel when it exploded, sending the charge of shot into his brother's heart. The victim fell over on the bed, and died instantly.

RAVENOUS ESKIMOS

They Eat and Digest Food That Would Kill an Ordinary Man

We hear much of American dyspepsia, but there is one native race of America that is certainly not troubled in this respect. The Eskimo defies the laws of hygiene and thrives. He eats until he is satisfied, but is said never to be satisfied while a shred of his feast remains unconsumed. His capacity is limited by the supply and by that only.

The Eskimo cannot make any mistake about the manner of cooking his food; since, as a rule, he does not cook it. Nor, so far as the blubber or fat of the arctic animal is concerned, is the Eskimo concerned about his manner of eating it. Indeed, he may be said not to eat it at all. He cuts it into long strips an inch wide and an inch thick and then lowers it down his throat as one might lower a rope into a well.

Despite all this the Eskimo does not suffer from indigestion. He can make a good meal of the flesh and skin of the walrus, provision so hard and gritty that in cutting up the animal the knife must be continually sharpened.

The teeth of the little Eskimo child will, it is said by those in a position to know, meet in a bit of walrus skin as the teeth of an American child would meet in the flesh of an apple, although the hide of the walrus is from half an inch to an inch in thickness and bears considerable resemblance to the hide of an elephant. The Eskimo child will bite it and digest it and never know what dyspepsia means.

Millers Worm Powders were devised to promptly relieve children who suffer from the ravages of worms. It is a simple preparation warranted to destroy stomachic and intestinal worms without shock or injury to the most sensitive system. They act thoroughly and painlessly, and though in some cases they may cause vomiting, that is an indication of their powerful action and not of any nauseating property.

On a Philadelphia paper worked Julius Kaufman, a Dane, who wrote pungent editorials, Kaufman's English was impeccable, but his writing was impossible. It seemed to have been done with a bent pin and an asphalt mixture. George Kennedy was the only man on the copy desk who could read it. One day Kennedy came to Editor Thompson, shaking his head. "It's all off," he said. "I have lost my punch. I read this thing of Kaufman's with perfect ease until I got half-way through—and then I stuck. I don't know why. The second half of his stuff looks just like the first half but I can't read it. Thompson took that manuscript over to a corner. By and by Thompson came back with lines of strain around his mouth. Put it up to Kaufman, said he. Either he's gone floozy or we have. So when Kaufman came in they gave him his manuscript and told him to go away somewhere and find out what it meant. By and by he came back beaming. It was easy, said he. The second part I had yooost wrote in Danish.

Air Sickness

M. Berget, a French aeronaut, after speaking of the conditions of the atmosphere in general, brings out some points on aviator's sickness. Aeroplanes sometimes reach altitudes of ten thousand feet in an hour, and here the effects on the ear such as humming or cracking noise are about the same as in a balloon, but the effect on the respiratory organs is different. The pilot is sooner out of breath and he feels a special kind of uneasiness. During the descent, the heart beats are of greater amplitude, but without accelerating. A quicker descent in a sailing flight at a speed of 1,000 or 1,200 feet a minute or even more, causes a feeling of a special kind, or uneasiness, accompanied with humming in the ears. Burning in the face is also felt and a severe headache, also a great tendency to sleep which has been before observed. The movements of the body are sluggish and unskillful. These symptoms continue for some time after the landing, and the tension in the arteries is noticed to be higher than the normal.

Then the storm Grew Worse

I was a fool ever to marry you, sobbed Mrs. Winks.

Now, my dear, said Winks, nobly, I can not permit you to take the blame for that. It was I who was the fool for ever asking you. The mistake was not yours, but mine.

A cornetist who went into the woods and played, so won the heart of some people from Italy that he has been invited over with all his family and the cornet to spend the summer.

Dr. Johnson to the contrary notwithstanding, puns are occasionally excusable. This one, attributed by the Brooklyn Times to a boarding house keeper of that city, is good enough to pass muster.

One of the young men who lived in the boarding house had the double fault of slowness in paying his bill and fussiness about the table service. One morning he said peevishly to the landlady:

Mrs. Jones, will you tell me why my napkin is so damp?

Yes, Mr. Wicks, replied the landlady promptly. It's because there is so much due to your board.

A Rainless Wheat

In the Nineteenth Century Dr. William Macdonald gives an account of the work done by the South African Union Department of Agriculture, of which he is chief, in solving the problem of securing a suitable wheat that can be grown on dry veldts and that has satisfactorily solved by the cultivation of the durum wheats. The writer gives the following interesting details as to the wheat.

Ripe durum wheat in the field looks like barley, and one is apt, on seeing it for the first time, to confuse it with the latter cereal. It is usually fairly tall, with broad, smooth leaves, the heads are heavily bearded, the kernels large and very hard, having less starch than the common types and varying in color from a light to a reddish yellow. The grain of the finest durum wheat is large, very hard, whitish, and slightly transparent. Durum wheats are grown both as spring and winter wheats. To ensure success they should be sown on moisture-saving fallows, and the growing wheat should be lightly harrowed to renew the soil-blanket and so retain the soil-moisture until harvest time.

Kadiak Island Bears

The biggest bears in the world are to be found on Kadiak Island, in the Gulf of Alaska, south of the great shoulder of territory that stretches out into the Pacific. The Kadiak bears are of the polar breed, perfectly white, with long heavy fur, and are twice the size of the black bear of the Rocky Mountains. They weigh 2,400 to 3,000 pounds, stand as high as an ordinary cow and are the biggest carnivorous animals living. The tracks they leave in the snow have often measured fifteen inches in length and ten inches in width. They are savage and fight desperately when attacked.

Bear traps are usually baited with honey, but the Kadiak trapper uses a pig. Bears are uncommonly fond of pork, and a pig when imprisoned in a trap makes a demonstration which attracts the attention of the bears at a longer distance than the odor of honey.

Kadiak is wooded and mountainous, but it has good natural harbors. There is a population of some 1,500 mostly Eskimos, living on the coast and engaged in the salmon fishing industry.

Losing Game

Crawford—Why don't you try jollying your wife a little? It's easy to tell her she's looking younger and more beautiful every day.

Crabshaw—I tried that once, and she nailed me for money to have her picture taken.

What is it wound up on that cart? asked the old lady sitting by the fire house.

Firemen's hose, was the reply. Excuse me, she said indignantly, you can't tell me any fireman or anyone else ever had legs to fit those things.

Hobson's Choice

What is a popular phrase? someone once asked. Something we all repeat like parrots, without knowing its origin, was the reply of the cynic; and to a certain extent he was right. How did those common phrases "tuff-hunters" and "fool's paradise" arise? We have an idea that the former refers to the person who seeks the society and apes the manners of the Upper Ten; but why "tuff"? And why "paradise" for the fool who shuts his eyes to threatening troubles and dangers, satisfied with the enjoyment of the moment?

As a matter of fact, the latter phrase originated in the theological argument that there is a place for fools just outside paradise, while the term tuff-hunting, took its rise at the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, where at one time the young noblemen wore a peculiarly-formed cap with a tuft, which presumably attracted hangers-on.

Many other curious stories of the origin of popular phrases are given in "Everyday Phrases Explained" (Pearson). It is related that "Hobson's choice" arose from the fact that Hobson, a noted carrier in Cambridge, would only let out his horses and coaches for hire in rotation, refusing to allow his customers to choose, a customer being compelled to take the horse nearest the door. Thus it became customary when anything was choice.

Eating humble pie is a phrase which really arose from the corruption of the word "umbles" or "numbles," the coarser parts of a deer killed in hunting, which when made into a pie, were formerly reserved for the lower hunt servants; while cooking his goose, is a phrase which originated when the King of Sweden, on approaching a hostile town, excited the contempt of the inhabitants by the smallness of his army. To express this they hung out a goose for him to shoot at, whereupon the king set fire to the town to cook their goose.

Long ago unscrupulous people used to take a cat tied in a bag to market, where they tried to sell it for a pig. If, however, a purchaser opened the bag before buying, the cat of course, jumped out, displaying the fraud. Hence the term: letting the cat out of the bag.

SHE WAS HELPLESS FOR TWO YEARS*WHY MRS. BALDWIN RECOMMENDS DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

She Could Find Nothing to Cure Her Rheumatism. Till on a Neighbor's Advice She Tried Dodd's Kidney Pills.

St. Walburg, Sask. (Special).—"I can truly recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills for any one suffering from rheumatism." These are the words of Mrs. W. A. Baldwin, a highly respected resident of this place. And Mrs. Baldwin gives her reasons.

"I was nearly helpless with rheumatism for two years," she states. "I got medicine from the doctor, and tried several other remedies but nothing helped me. Then one of my neighbors advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I bought four boxes and they helped almost from the first. I have used nearly two dozen boxes and am nearly cured."

That rheumatism is one of the results of diseased kidneys is again shown in Mrs. Baldwin's case. She had headaches, stiffness of the joint, and backache, her sleep was broken and unrefreshing, and she was always tired and nervous. Her limbs swelled and she was always thirsty. These are all symptoms of diseased kidneys. When she cured her kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills, the symptoms vanished—and so did the rheumatism.

Pugnacious Fish

Many fishes like the knights of old, fight among themselves for the love of fighting or because they have nothing better to do, according to a bulletin of the New York zoological society. There are others, however, which fight to protect themselves or their young. Speaking of the fights among fishes in the aquarium, the bulletin says: The angel fishes, beautiful as they are in appearance, have perhaps the most devilish disposition of all. A tank of angel fishes reminds one of the notorious, even tempered family who were all mad all the time. The watchfulness of attendants usually prevents the fatal terminations of these misunderstandings but occasionally a fatal injury is inflicted. Such a case, the bulletin adds, happened when two large green morays engaged in a vicious encounter, during which one of the combatants was disemboweled and had to be killed. These eel-like fishes are extremely powerful and active and coil and strike like snakes.

After the enjoyment of wearing his first pair of trousers, the young boy of the family amused his mother the following morning, when she said: Come, dear, let me dress you. The boy said: Oh, no mamma! Don't dress me, pants me.

The Centenary of the Steam Engine

It is a little less than a hundred years since the building of Stephenson's 'Rocket,' and there are many who think of it as the first locomotive; but it was not, nor was Stephenson the original inventor of steam traction on railways. Doubtless his genius well deserves the fame which it has won, as do that of Fulton and Morse; yet it can scarcely be disputed that all three of those illustrious benefactors of the race did their great works in the successful adaptation and combination of elements which had previously been discovered and employed by others.

The germ of the locomotive was first displayed by Trevithick, at the end of the eighteenth century, but he lacked the genius or the persistence to bring it to perfection. It was left to William Hedley, chief engineer of the historic Wylam colliery, near Newcastle-on-Tyne, assisted by his colleagues, Timothy Hackworth, to produce in June 1813, a practical locomotive steam engine for use on the colliery railroad. This epoch-making machine which was named 'Puffing Billy,' and is still preserved in the South Kensington Museum, worked satisfactorily and was the prototype of many others which were widely used for fifteen years, until in 1829 the Liverpool & Manchester Railroad Company encouraged Stephenson to devise and build the Rocket. The Newcastle engineer's achievement of just a century ago may therefore be regarded as the beginning of what must rank among the three or four most valuable and influential mechanical inventions in the history of the world.

The Sunday School Millions

Delegates representing about 3,000,000 teachers and over 27,000,000 scholars enrolled in over 300,000 Sunday schools will take part in the seventh world's Sunday school convention, which opened in Zurich, Switzerland. This vast army, representative of all nations and peoples, is the outgrowth of a movement that had its inception only one and a third centuries ago. The United States claims to have 12,000,000 Sunday scholars, Great Britain 7,500,000, Canada 750,000, Germany 750,000, Australasia 750,000, India 500,000 and South Africa 500,000.

Warts on the hands is a disfigurement that troubles many ladies. Holway's Corn Cure will remove the blemishes without pain.

The World as a Clock

La Mappemonde (the map of the world) is the name of an ingenious clock, the invention of a modern French clockmaker. The movement is in the interior of the globe, and causes it to revolve, and so mark off the hours on the equatorial band by means of a locomotive, which by the way, has a separate mechanism of its own whereby, if the globe is made stationary it may make a circuit of the equator on its own rails in twelve hours.

Two years ago you told me the Woggs car was the best automobile in the world.

Yes.

And now you say the Boggs is the only one worth having.

I get my information direct. The salesman who sold me the Woggs car has gone to work for the Boggs people.

Is Health Only a Game of Chance

If you are accustomed to look on health as a gamble you will probably prove a loser early in the game.

Some may hold on to health and life, and defy the laws of nature, but there are many rules of the game which are conducive to health and long life.

Take nervous diseases, for example. There are many symptoms to warn one of the approach of nervous exhaustion long before there is danger of locomotor ataxia or some dreadful form of paralysis.

But they seem such little things that their danger signal is not taken notice of. Sleeplessness, headache, indigestion, irritability, loss of vigor and energy, discouragement and despondency all point to low vitality and exhausted nerves.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has been wonderfully successful in the cure of nervous diseases of a serious nature, such as prostration, locomotor ataxia and partial paralysis, but persistent treatment and considerable patience are necessary.

On this account we prefer to think of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a preventive treatment, which overcomes these symptoms by rebuilding the feeble, wasted nerve cells and restoring vigor to mind and body.

The First Plug Hat

The shiny silk cylindrical hat, sometimes called topper, high hat, plug, high dicer, stove-pipe, or four-gallon hat, by the irreverent, seems fated to disappear, after little more than one century of existence. In England the place of its origin, it was long esteemed the very highest badge of respectability, so much admired that varsity crews rowed races and varsity eleven played cricket in correct shiny bell-toppers.

This form of headgear was first seen in London on January 15, 1797, when John Hetherington, a haberdasher, emerged from his shop in the Strand wearing a silk hat and was promptly surrounded by an astonished mob of such proportions that he was arrested and charged before the Lord Mayor, with inciting to riot. The officer who arrested Hetherington testified that he appeared upon a public highway wearing upon his head a tall silk structure, which he called a silk hat, having a shiny luster, and calculated to frighten timid people. Several women fainted at the unusual sight, while children screamed, dogs yelped and a young son of Cordwalner Thomas who was returning from a chandler's shop, was thrown down by the crowd which collected and had his arm broken. The defendant pleaded that he was merely exercising a right, possessed by every Englishman, to appear in any head-dress he chose, and had not violated any law. He was, nevertheless, bound over in $2,500 to keep the peace. This verdict aroused the wrath of the Times. In its issue of January 16, 1797, the hat worn by Hetherington is described as an advance in dress reform, and one which is bound sooner or later to stamp its character upon the entire community. The new hat is destined to work a revolution in headgear, and we think the officers of the Crown erred in placing the defendant under arrest.

WIRE WOUNDS

My mare, a very valuable one, was badly bruised and cut by being caught in a wire fence. Some of the wounds would not heal, although I tried many different medicines. Dr. Bell advised me to use MINARD'S LINIMENT, diluted at first, then stronger as the sores began to look better, until after three weeks, the sores have healed, and best of all, the hair is growing well, and is NOT WHITE as is almost always the case in horse wounds.

The Megaphone at Sea

The British Admiralty has ordered a number of megaphones fitted with the new transmitter designed primarily by Dr. Jules Glover of London for the telephone. The speaking-piece of Dr. Glover's instrument is made up of two parts, one for the mouth and the other for the nose. It is claimed that a megaphone half the usual size will give superior results with the new attachment.

Another Successful Year for Western Canada College

This well known Resident and Day College for Boys has just closed another very successful year. This is the tenth year since the founding of this, the pioneer institution in age and success of its kind in the North-West.

Although other similar Schools and Colleges have been started since, Western Canada is still the largest and best known between Winnipeg and Vancouver.

The results of the examinations taken by the older boys in connection with the Universities have quite come up to the expectations of the College staff. Most gratifying reports have come in concerning the boys that have gone to Eastern Universities and Colleges.

High places have been taken, notably in McGill University Engineering courses, and in the Royal Military College, Kingston, by Western Canada College boys.

The splendid results in physique and general bearing of the training in the Gymnasium and Cadet Corps have frequently been remarked by parents and visitors. Western Canada College pays particular attention to this side of college life, and keeps a highly paid expert to take charge of scientific physical training.

Had it not been for the present financial stringency, Western Canada College would have been far along with its new buildings on its magnificent property.

Plans, however, are in hand, and as soon as possible buildings of the finest kind for College and School purposes will be erected.

This is but what the College demands after its career of successful pioneer work, for it was founded some years before Alberta and Saskatchewan became Provinces and its record of success in preparing lads for college and business is amply testified by the high places taken, the scholarships won, and the testimonials received.

BOWSER'S PIANO.

He Doesn't Agree With Mrs. B. That It Needs Tuning.

A MATTER OF ACOUSTICS.

He Explains the Science of Sounds to His Wife, but Encounters Difficulties When He Essays to Move Instrument—Later He Needs the Arnica.

By M. QUAD.
[Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.]

At a sudden Mr. Bowser dropped the evening paper he was reading and turned to Mrs. Bowser with:

"Didn't you ask me a week or so ago to send up a piano tuner?"

"It was all of three months ago," she replied.

"It slipped my mind, and I'm glad it did."

"You like the tin pan tone?"

"I have just caught on to an idea. That piano doesn't need tuning any more than our old cat does."

"Any musician would tell you that it does."

"Then I'll tangle 'em all up a bit if them furs! What's wrong with a piano?"

"Is what?" was asked as he paused to survey the room.

"Think of the tuner coming up here and tightening up a wire or two and charging me $5!"

"You know they never do any such thing. But what is it about the piano?"

"Here, let me run the keys over."

"By George! By George! My idea is confirmed!"

"Mr. Bowser, will you kindly tell me what all this means?" she asked.

"It means that we have lived in this house for ten years, and for ten years we have had a piano, and yet I have paid no attention to the matter of acoustics. It was only this evening that I felt the discord."

"Is there anything wrong with the piano?"

"Perhaps not, but it must be moved at once to a different position. We will experiment a little and correct the discord. As I said, I can't understand why I should have so long neglected the law of acoustics, but better late than never."

"I think it sounds all right," she ventured to observe after a silence.

The Science of Acoustics.

"Um! Very likely you do, as you have anything but a musical ear, but a few more such jars as I received a minute ago would make me scream out. I presume you have heard or read of acoustics?"

"It is something about sounds, isn't it?"

"It is a good deal about sounds, Mrs. Bowser. It is the life of oratory or music. You must study a room or hall to find the best spot for either effort. A curtain, a fireplace, a picture even, may deflect and ruin the softest, sweetest notes of the finest piano ever made. Clay, Calhoun and Webster always turned their backs to a window when speaking, and Patti always stood in the center of the stage to warble. It won't take me fifteen minutes to find the spot for our piano."

Mrs. Bowser said no more. She knew that piano would be moved if it took twenty horses to do it, and she wondered what the damages would amount to. Mr. Bowser expatiated at length on the acoustics and the benefit to be derived by a student of them and removed his coat and vest, collar and cuffs, and stood in the middle of the room and said:

"It's no wonder there is a discord. The tones of the piano strike the wall and rebound. We have got the bookcase where the piano ought to be. I'll make the change in five minutes."

"But you ought to have help," protested Mrs. Bowser.

"Never mind the help. The first thing is to haul that bookcase out of the way. You'd better take care of that blomed old cat or she'll get hurt."

Bowser Tackles the Job.

It was an old fashioned bookcase with a couple of hundred books in it. Instead of removing the books, Mr. Bowser tackled the job wholesale, and of course he had got the thing fairly clear of the wall, where it had rested for years, when a caster fell out and the case tumbled over with a crash that shook the house from top to bottom. He escaped by jumping over a chair, and the cat just missed it by a long leap, and when Mrs. Bowser suggested calling in a man to help, she was met with:

"When I don't know enough to run a bookcase I'll apply for admission to an idiot asylum. If you hadn't been fooling around here it never would have happened. Go upstairs and let me conduct this job in my own way."

The cook came to the head of the basement stairs to see if the roof had fallen in, and she seized the opportunity to whisper to Mrs. Bowser:

"Is it powder or dynamite this time, ma'am? If we are to be blown up or scattered in pieces I'll take kindly of ye to give me time enough to pronounce my mother's name before I die."

Bookcase: His First Victim.

When Mr. Bowser had the room to himself he gave the old bookcase several sturdy kicks and then dragged it aside and tossed the books after it. In a quarter of an hour he was ready to tackle the piano. When he jumped for it he hadn't the slightest doubt in his mind that it would prove an easy customer, but after a tug and a pull, which broke both suspenders, he realized that it had settled down to stay.

He took a rest for a minute and then braced himself for a push. After an effort that bulged his eyes and reddened his face to a sallowish sunburn he effected a move of two inches, but could not gain another's breadth. Mrs. Bowser came down and suggested that she call in a passing pedestrian, and the cook called up from the basement that she used to toy with ice chests and barrels and ashes, but Mr. Bowser yelled at them:

"Didn't I say I was bossing this job? It's simply that the blomed old thing has settled down in the quicksand or something."

Then he seized it by a corner and braced his feet against the wall and heaved, but there was no give.

Piano Defies All Efforts.

He worked his way in behind it and gave a mighty push, but only the brick wall behind him seemed to give way.

He crawled under it and sought to move it by humping up his back, but though he persisted till his spinal column was twisted out of plumb nothing moved.

The law of mechanics ought to apply to a piano, but it doesn't. Mr. Bowser sat panting and studying for five minutes before he decided that it didn't and that he had got to spring a sudden surprise or acknowledge his defeat. He got up and walked about in a careless way, and when the cook called up that she had once moved an ice chest weighing 900 pounds with her own hands, he didn't reply.

He was giving that piano time to dissipate its suspicions and relax its guard. It was only twenty minutes before he felt that the time was ripe, and then he cautiously spat on his hands, edged into position, and of a sudden he sprang forward and grabbed a corner of the instrument and put forth all his strength.

They Heard a Crash.

Mrs. Bowser and the cook heard the grunt uttered by a man when he tries to push a smokehouse up hill, and this was followed by a crash. Mr. Bowser had lost his hold and gone rolling over the door. When the women got to him he was sitting up and looking about him in a dazed way and wondering if he had pulled the side of the house out or yanked the piano across the street. Not a word was said for a long minute. Then Mrs. Bowser softly observed:

"You will find the arnica on the mantel in my room, and if you will give your back a good rubbing and get into bed I'll fix up the bookcase with the help of the cook."

Mr. Bowser looked at her with an ice cold glare, and once or twice he opened his mouth as if to speak, but presently he got to his feet in a weary way, made a faint kick at the cat and went creeping upstairs like a man who had no further interest in life.

Love's Torments.

Neighbor—What's Mamie cryin' about?

Mother—That fortune teller told her that she's goin' ter marry a tall, handsome, dark nobleman.

Neighbor—Well, ain't that a good fortune?

Mother—Yer'd think so, but now she's broken hearted at the thought of givin' up the ugly, little, sawed off, sandy haired bricklayer she's in love with—Judge.

When the Trouble Begins.

"I'm a poet I'd have you know," remarked the caller.

"Indeed!" replied the editor. "How long have you been a poet?"

"Why, poets are born, sir."

"Oh, yes, I forgot. I remember now that is the beginning of the trouble."

LONDON'S OLDEST SCHOOL.

Dame Alice Owen's Is a Remarkable Establishment.

An interesting educational experiment is about to be tried in connection with what is probably London's most ancient school. This school, which is known as Dame Alice Owen's School, situated near the Angel, Islington, and which dates back three hundred years, has no playground or playing fields attached to it. Some time ago, however, means were found to purchase ten acres of ground near Barnet. As these playing fields, however, are eight miles from the school, the present headmaster, Mr. R. F. Cholmeley, is anxious to erect four class rooms on the ground, and to arrange for the boys to be sent there in batches one day a week, so that they may combine lessons with play.

It is announced that there is a likelihood of sufficient funds being obtained to allow of the scheme being carried out. Behind this announcement lies a scholastic romance of exceptional interest; for the origin of Dame Owen's School was really due to an accident.

Three hundred years ago the district was a favorite meeting place of sportsmen, who practiced hawking, hunting, and, above all, archery, and it was the last-named much-favored sport which really led to the foundation of the school. One day Mistress Alice Wilks, who subsequently became Dame Owen, was walking in the fields, when an arrow was shot through the crown of her hat, then worn very high, "which so startled her," to quote the words of the historian of the time, "that she there declared, if she lived to be a lady, she would erect something on that plot of ground in commemoration of the great mercy shown by the Almighty in that astonishing deliverance."

Mistress Wilks married three times, and the story goes that when a widow for the last time her servant, who had been present on the occasion of the arrow incident, happened to remind her of her vow. She answered that she remembered the occurrence, and intended to fulfil her promise. The result was that she purchased the little estate on which the school now stands and built an institution for thirty boys, of whom twenty-four were to be from Islington and six from Clerkenwell.

In commemoration of the event which led to its foundation, three arrows were fixed, one in the apex and the other two on the corners of the gabled front of the original school. When, in 1840, the old premises were pulled down, two of the arrows were discovered, and are still to be seen on the walls of one of the class-rooms.

A Public House Comedy.

The story of an amusing comedy in a public house, worthy of the pen of Mr. W. W. Jacobs, has leaked out. One afternoon recently a miner entered a public house and challenged the landlord to play "seven up" at dominoes for a "round" to the company. Things being pretty quiet, the publican accepted the challenge, and soon the miner, who was a bit of a crack at the game, was leading by four chalks to nothing. At this stage two of the men who had been at the bar quietly disappeared, and shortly afterwards a steady stream of customers began to pour in, until by the time the game closed, with the miner victorious by seven chalks to two, the place was completely filled.

The explanation of the rapid filling up of the bar after the disappearance of two of the company seems to be that the twain, when they found Boniface losing, had set out to spread the news that so-and-so was playing the publican in question for a "round," that the publican was losing by so many chalks, and that if they just dropped quietly in they would be in time for a free drink.

How successful they were in their "recruiting" will be seen when it is stated that the publican had to stand treat to no fewer than thirty-seven persons.—Lochelly Times.

Cautious and True.

A good story is being told of Mr. Gulland, M.P., the Government's Scottish Whip.

During a recent all-night sitting when everybody wanted to go home to bed and couldn't, he passed a Liberal M.P. reclining on a bench, half asleep.

"Is this debate going on much longer?" the M.P. asked drowsily.

It was one of those questions with which Whips are for ever being bombarded, for, needless to say, no one—not even Mr. Asquith—could answer it with any degree of certainty.

Mr. Gulland was equal to the occasion, however, for he glanced at his questioner with the most sympathetic air in the world, and answered, gently: "I think we're getting nearer to the end of it."

The Welsh Descended From Noah.

The smaller a nation the longer the pedigree of the native. Thus every Scotoman of decent lineage is descended from the Bruce, every Irishman from the red kings and every Welshman from Noah. The last claim has been made for the family of the late Lord Tredegar. Core, writing in 1800, when touring in Monmouthshire, wrote that "fanciful genealogists derived the origin of the Morgans from the third son of Noah," but that there was a division of opinion in favor of the first.—London Telegraph.

He is the freeman whom the truth makes free, and all are slaves beside.

A DISAPPOINTED SHAH.

Queer Story of a Prizefight in an English Royal Garden.

In his book of memories Major-General Sir Owen Tudor Burns tells a story of the first visit of a shah to Great Britain.

The shah wanted to see a prizefight, with blood. After much anxious thought and consultation with Lord Queensberry an innocent glove fight was arranged in the Buckingham Palace stables, to take place quietly half an hour before the shah was to receive Lord Shaftesbury and the archbishops and bishops with a memorial asking him to protect the interests of the Christians in Persia.

But the shah slept late. The prizefighters overlapped the prelates. A footman made a mistake in opening the door. Archbishops and bishops following the shah in a moment found themselves more or less in a ring round the two prizefighters. The bishops hustled back to the reception room, the fight was stopped, the shah was angry and disappointed, and Lord Shaftesbury was heard shouting: "A prizefight in the garden of the queen's palace forsooth! I will denounce you all over the kingdom!"

Mutual explanations followed, the matter was set right, we sent special messages to the reporters to keep it out of the press, and I was later on privileged to explain it all to the Queen, who took the matter much more calmly than her Lord Chamberlain. Once back, however, inside Buckingham Palace, we all smoothed our ruffled feathers and listened to a most gloomy oration from Lord Shaftesbury.

The shah, angry at the interruption of his prizefight, turned round to Sir Henry Rawlinson and growled in Persian: "Hang the Christians in Persia! Tell them they're all right!"

Rawlinson translated that into a long, eloquent, beautiful reply to the deputation, while doubtless the disappointed boxers were having a consolation scrap in the stables. Lord Shaftesbury did not denounce them, though the shah's bear leaders lived in terror for some days.

The Lord Chamberlain blamed me, I blamed the shah, the shah blamed the querry, the querry blamed the footman, the footman blamed every one all round, and we gave the prizefighters $25 a piece, with a resolution written in blood that never would any of us again arrange a prizefight, even for a shah of shahs, in a royal palace garden.

Fortune's Darling.

This is how they style the Right Hon. George Wyndham, one of the most virile of the Opposition Front-benchers in the House of Commons. Handsome and conspicuously smart—though he has by no means been able to get all his own way in public life—Mr. Wyndham possesses a perfect mastery of the grand manner, and he is the step-father of the Duke of Westminster. Once he was Mr. Balfour's private secretary, and he has been Under-Secretary at the War Office and Chief Secretary for Ireland.

Whilst holding the latter thorny post he piloted the Land Act of 1903 through the Commons, and boldly made Sir Anthony MacDonnell, a Catholic Home Ruler, his Permanent Under-Secretary. He has been in the Coldstreams, rides regularly to hounds and is a profound Shakespearean scholar. Still under fifty, Mr. George Wyndham married the Countess Grosvenor and got himself elected for Dover in 1889, and everybody expects that he will come into high office again when the Unionists revert to power. He has a seat on the board of the Chatham and Dover Railway, and holds the burgesses of the chief of the Cinque Ports, so to speak, in the hollow of his elegant hand.

Jersey Lily's Mascot.

Lady De Bathe has a perfect passion for turquoise, and among her many jewels the charming actress-sportswoman possesses one particular gem which has a very peculiar history indeed.

Some years ago—she was Lillie Langtry then—Lady De Bathe was staying in Venice. Always particularly fond of swimming, she was enjoying a dip one morning in the Lido when she saw something at her feet through the clear depths of the blue water.

Down she dived daintily, and brought immediately thereafter to the surface an exquisite specimen of a Persian turquoise. Thereupon she engraved an amatory message in the language of the sunny Eastern land.

She had it set, and has ever since worn the stone round her neck suspended by a thin golden chain. Whatever luck has fallen to her in the theatre, on the turf, or otherwise, its fair owner attributes to her strangely found mascot.

Women have been finding how greatly needed is the glint of color and light with the dark tones of winter materials. To further this end amber has been forced into great favor, in both real and imitation grades. Undoubtedly the best may be had in the Chinese stores of New York city, but the department stores are selling amber which is said to be genuine from $1.95 to $12.50 a string. The necklaces are long and of either the clouded or clear amber. The clear is cut. A very easy little test of the genuine beads is found in rubbing them vigorously on a piece of velvet or silk. If the beads are real there will be enough electricity produced to pick up small pieces of flimsy paper as the beads are passed over them.

Milady's Mirror

After a Day in the Open.

After a blowy, dusty jaunt outdoors it is necessary to remove whatever grime the skin may have collected, but if a good face bath with hot water and soap is taken at night, as it should be, this temporary scrub can be done with cold cream. Pick up a good dab of the cream with the fingers of the right hand, smear those of the left and work the unguent into the skin with both hands, going round and round over each spot with the finger tips.

After the skin has absorbed as much of the cream as it will, wipe it as dry as possible with a clean cloth and then go over it with another rag dipped in some good toilet water made hot. Rose-water, violet or lavender will do, but the heat is required for a good effect, the warm perfume acting as an astringent.

When washing the face during the day in this manner the throat should also receive the same treatment so as to keep its condition up to that of the face.

But if the skin does not respond well to the cleansing with cream a teaspoonful of the following lotion might be used in a small quantity of clear warm water:

Tincture of benzoin..... 1 ounce
Tincture of musk..... 2 drams
Tincture of ambergris..... 4 drams
Rectified spirits..... 6 ounces
Orange flower water..... 1½ pints

Add the tinctures to the spirits, then mingle with the perfume water. If only a small quantity of the lotion is needed have it put up by a druggist, as in this way the proportions are certain to be measured correctly.

This lotion is cooling and refreshing to the skin, astringent, bleaching and softening, and if the teaspoonful is put in only a cupful of warm water it will have a better effect than if a larger quantity of water were used.

The effect of massage upon the face skin is magical. If the massage is done at home care should be taken not to drag down the muscles of the cheeks or to work the throat in such a way that the skin will be loosened too much under the chin. The movements needed are very simple. The tips of the fingers of both hands are put at the center of the forehead first and worked round and round. They are then run toward the temples in the same manner.

The cheeks are massaged upward, the throat away from the center toward the ears, and after the rite is over a cold spray and a rub off with cold water and benzoin are needed for astringent purposes, as, together with the unguent required with such manipulation, massage is loosening to the skin.

New Gospel of Prettiness.

Serenity, not vivacity, is the child aid to beauty.

Dr. Bertha Scher, a Viennese beauty adviser, says:

"Brainstorms, envy, nagging, nervousness and jealousy, all these things women must stamp out of their lives if they would be healthy and fair."

"Serenity is more than a fad among up to date women who make the most of themselves. After years of wasting nervous energy American women are beginning to understand how inimical to good looks and well being are the habits of hurry and worry."

"Poise and good cheer are now being practiced as religiously as deep breathing exercises and gymnastics. 'Vivacity at any cost,' which used to be the motto of the fashionable woman, is no longer observed."

"And, thanks to the change, we are less afflicted with nervous giggles and empty chatters than formerly. In view of present improvement in woman's self control and manner we may even hope for a time when an afternoon tea in full swing won't sound like a babel of phonographs."

"In New York, where I have spent several years, the women are even more carefully groomed than those whom I knew in Paris, where matrons actually fifty-five years old deemed it a disgrace to look more than thirty years old. With proper habits of living, thinking and grooming, any woman can be young and attractive looking even at the grandmother period."

"To me there is something and in the appearance of a woman who seems to be surrendering meekly to the touches of time. A woman too stout or too thin, who merely combs her hair an old way and allows lines and sagging muscles to disfigure her face, is really pathetic."

His Idea of Water.

At one time the bailiff in charge of an English jury was sworn to keep them "without meat, drink or fire." It was Justice Maule who gave the classic reply to the bailiff, who inquired whether he might grant a jury man's request for a glass of water. "Well, it is not meat, and I should not call it drink. Yes, you may."

LOVE IS ECCENTRIC

Often it seems to Uphold the Old Theory that Opposites Attract

Men like all kinds of women. There are ugly men who adore beautiful women, but there are also handsome men who worship at the shrines of women who are quite unlike Helen of Troy. Many good men have loved, and will love, bad women. Who has not seen bad men devoted to saintly women?

On the other hand the dwarf is often captivated by the large framed woman whose head approaches the ceiling. I have known deaf women beloved by talkative men; lame women cherished by men who were agile; stupid women thought sensible, or even clever, by men who were brilliant and affected women solemnly admired by the most natural of men; girls who turned the heads of grandfathers and old women who lured mere boys to their feet.

Effeminate men often seek many women, while delicate women who never leave the sofa attract the nimble and the hunter of big game. The man who does not know 'God Save the King' when he hears it as often as not marries the woman who is mad about Wagner, and the man who never goes to church chooses as his helpmate the devout woman who visits a district and teaches in Sunday school.

All kinds of women are liked—nay, more, are loved by men. Why not? For where is the man who cannot find one woman—if not two—to think him what he probably thinks himself, the most perfect man in the world—until the honeymoon is wanting?

She Spoke the American Language

He was proud of his linguistic ability was this American dentist. He didn't boast being a polyglot, but with an English partner who was himself reasonably accomplished in languages he did manage to take care of a thriving business in Buenos Aires with less than the ordinary linguistic difficulties that confront an American in a foreign land.

Naturally, he didn't expect trouble in making himself understood when a young woman was ushered in from the reception room of his office. She was manifestly a person of breeding. In Portuguese, the language of Argentina, he asked her wants.

Uncomprehendingly she shook her head.

He smilingly tried the French: Que voulez-vous, method of making himself understood.

Obviously she was still in the dark. His partner essayed a little assistance in Spanish. Que quiere V? he asked.

She but shook her head the more vigorously.

He tried Parlato Italiano and his partner came at her with Sprechen Die Deutsch? each with equal lack of success.

In despair the American turned to the Englishman. What in hell does she speak? he asked.

A happy smile illuminated the woman's face. That's it, she said. I simply speak United States. I have a wisdom tooth I want treated.

Bridling the Mississippi

The Mississippi river is cutting a new channel near Memphis, Tenn., and unless government engineers are successful in checking the hungry stream, Memphis may be left high and dry a mile from the course of the stream. Her harbor facilities will be ruined and the city left with the mud bank between its fine levee and the stream. Government engineers are now wrestling with the problem and declare they will win out.

For several years the turbulent Mississippi, raging like a hungry lion, has been eating railroads, houses and farms, crunching them in its muddy maw and carrying them down to the Gulf. During last year the hungry stream ran against what looked like an insurmountable obstacle. A sheer wall of hard rock appeared and residents of Hopefield point, opposite Memphis, felt that the rock would ruin its appetite. But the river has undermined the rock, and is at its old frolic of converting farms into nothingness.

Government engineers are now weaving a mat of willows into a great carpet a mile long and 200 feet wide. When this is completed it will be loaded with rocks. Then a pile driver will pin it to the bottom. It is believed this will stop the erosion. If it does not, engineers assert there will be nothing left but to let the river take the course it chooses.

Busy Women of Prominence

The wives of the members of the new Dutch Cabinet are all workers in some sphere of labor, as the following list shows:

Mme. Zablet, wife of the Premier, is an official parliamentary shorthand writer.

Mme. Brandes, wife of the Finance Minister, a sculptor.

Mme. Munc, wife of the Defence Minister, a school teacher, with a degree in mathematics, president of a women's suffrage society.

Mme. Nielson, wife of the Minister of Education, a surgeon.

Mme. Pedersen, wife of the Minister of Agriculture, is an indefatigable agriculturist.

A pompous physician who was inclined to criticize others was watching a stonemason build a fence for his neighbor, and thought the mason was using too much mortar. He said: Jim, mortar covers up a good many mistakes, does it not? Yes, doctor, replied the mason, and so does the spade.

Quaint Manx Laws

Many quaint and curious customs dating from ancient times are still observed in the Isle of Man, and not the least interesting of these is the ceremony that will be enacted today on Tynwald Hill. Men, women and children from all over the little island of the Irish Sea will gather on the hillside and listen to the official Manx laws. For centuries this archaic legal ceremony has been carried out on each fifth of July, except when that date falls on a Sunday, and it still retains most of the novel features that make it the most interesting observance of its kind to be witnessed anywhere in the world.

It is no longer possible to read all the laws that govern Manxmen, since the House of Keys, as the local legislation is called, is busy in adding new statutes as similar bodies elsewhere.

A Manx law that is no longer enforced, but which retains a place in the statute book, provides a penalty of $50 and the loss of both ears for anyone guilty of libelling the law-makers. The death penalty was long imposed for the theft of any amount above thirteen cents, while a flogging was the punishment for stealing a lesser sum. An exception was made in the case of horse and cattle thieves for it was set forth that, as they could not hide such animals, their act was more foolish than felonious.

Hall Caine, whose youth was spent in the Isle of Man, has described many of the interesting customs of the Manxmen in his novels. Of late years, however, the inhabitants have shed some of their peculiarities, owing to contact with tourists.

SUMMER HEAT HARD ON BABY

No season of the year is so dangerous to the life of little ones as is the summer. The excessive heat throws the little stomach out of order so quickly that unless prompt aid is at hand the baby may be beyond all human help before the mother realizes he is ill. Summer is the season when diarrhoea, cholera infantum, dysentery and colic are most prevalent. Any one of these troubles may prove deadly if not promptly treated. During the summer the mother's best friend is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and keep baby healthy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The old farmer was making his usual weekly call on Mrs. Wiggins. Pater is good this morning, madam, he said, casting an admiring look at the basketful he had brought.

Oh, is they? retorted Mrs. Wiggins. That reminds me. I want to have a word with you about them you sold me last week. How is it that them at the bottom of the basket is so much smaller than them on the top?

Come about like this, replied old John, a knowing look on his face. Pater is growing that fast now that by the time I get a basketful dug the last ones is about twice the size of the first.

The Oil of Power.—It is not claimed for Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil that it will cure every ill, but its uses are so various that it may be looked upon as a general pain killer. ## How Insects Breathe

All insects need air, even those that live in water, but no insect has nostrils, or any opening in the head through which it breathes. Instead there is a row of small openings called spiracles, down each side of the body, one on each segment beginning with the second or third segment of the thorax, or chest and extending back to the tip of the abdomen. The spiracles open into two air-tubes that extend the length of the insect. One on each side, just within the wall of the body. These tubes are connected in the thorax by two cross-tubes, and from them smaller tubes diverge. These in turn divide and redivide, growing constantly smaller, until the finest tubes permeate every part of the insect, even the tips of the antennae and the joints of the feet. The tubes are known as tracheae, and serve the same purpose that the lungs serve in the vertebrates; to carry oxygen to the blood and tissues. The outer openings or spiracles are protected in various ways—as for example, by a circle of hairs—in order to prevent the admission of anything except air. If they become clogged by any such substance as oil or grease, the insect suffocates, says an exchange. The humming of gnat, the buzzing of flies, and similar sounds, are produced by the vibration of the air in the spiracles and tracheae.

The Best Liver Pill.—The action of the liver is easily disarranged. A sudden chill, undue exposure to the elements, over-indulgence in some favorite food, excess in drinking, are a few of the causes. But whatever may be the cause, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills can be relied upon as the best corrective that can be taken. They are the leading liver pills and they have no superiors among such preparations.

Biggest Surveying Jobs

Two of the biggest jobs of surveying ever attempted are the marking of the boundary between Alaska and Canada, which has just been completed, and the marking of the southern boundary of Canada, which is now in progress. Both surveys are of a difficult nature, and the Alaskan boundary particularly so because of the mountainous and, in parts, inaccessible character of the regions traversed.

The most difficult part of the line was that starting at Mount St. Elias, on the southern shore of the peninsula of Alaska, and running southeast along eighty-three peaks of the coast range to the head of the Portland channel, a distance of about 700 miles. Much of this section of the boundary was inaccessible, and could only be reached where it was crossed by inlets connected with the sound that parallels the coast. From these points the peaks that mark the boundary, as well as the topography along the line, were located and mapped by triangulation and photo-surveying methods.

The line running north from Mount St. Elias to the Arctic ocean was not so difficult of access, although it lies over glaciers and some of the highest mountains in the world, but the work of marking was in many ways more like Arctic exploration than an ordinary job of surveying. This line runs due north and south, following the 141st meridian (longitude west from Greenwich), and is now marked by 188 stone monuments set about three miles apart. Everything had to be packed from the base of supplies, and for this purpose 200 Americans and Canadian horses were used. The total length of the Alaskan boundary is 1,507 miles, and the cost of surveying it was $1,500,000.

Jefferson's Table Manners

Jefferson himself overdid the part of being democratic, particularly with the British ambassador, Merry, who had the toughness of an English green-grocer in a tall hat and who had a wife now gently referred to as disagreeable.

At a state dinner Jefferson gave a woman his arm, but otherwise there was no order. The guests approached the table in a rush as if the dinner bell had rung in an old fashioned American hotel. Merry did not run fast enough, or he was too fat, or he was too dignified, and found himself seated where a British ambassador could only writhe.

He made a report of it to his government, and the next time Monroe the American then in London, was invited to a state dinner he was seated next to the kitchen, but unfortunately within hearing of some loud conversation at the head of the table, where the culture of the United States was being compared with that of South Africa.

Monroe not only made a report to his government but he laid a complaint before the British ministry, and just at a time when the two nations were in need of all the serenity that could command they became irritated over table manners.

Simply sometimes is much involved.

Equal Rights

You say a pedestrian has rights the same as a motor car? asked the querulous person.

Certainly, replied the policeman. Well maybe he has. But I can't help wondering what would happen to me if I went along the street making the same kind of noise as some of these automobile horns.

What caused you to walk out of prison in that offhand way?

Well, replied the recaptured convict, I suppose it was the same thing that made me leave home in the first place. It's a case of wanderlust.

WILSON'S FLY PADS

early in the season, and thus cut off a large proportion of the summer crop.

The Belgian Congo Cannibals

From Ruwi to Malange is perhaps eight hundred miles as the crow flies, but being pedestrians and as the cannibals were carrying on extremely active warfare in the country traversed by the direct route, for safety, we had to make a long detour that added almost two hundred miles to our trip. That was in July, 1907, and we had reached the most westerly of the Katanga mines at Ruwi with the intention of proceeding directly west to Angola. The southwest corner of the Congo was, at that time, a veritable hot-bed of cannibalism and slavery. All captives that the cannibals did not eat they sold to the Portuguese.

Such conditions had prevailed for many years, and the chances of improvement seemed extremely small. A few months later, however, the Compagnie Kassai, an immense rubber trading concern under the leadership of a chief du secteur, waged war on the cannibal Weshi and effectively put them to rout. Only here and there a few remain.

Seventy miles north of Lukoshi we found a stump, quiet evidently a sort of sacrificial altar, as it was decorated with human skulls, mostly those of little children. The territory in which this was found was occupied by the Weshi until less than three years ago. They were the worst slave traders of all the tribes of this section. It was very largely for their lawlessness and absolute disregard of the decrees of the Compagnie Kassai that they were driven from the country in which they had operated for so many years.

But though the Weshi, with their ghastly practices, were driven out, the Bachokwe remained, and the traffic in slaves continued.

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cape Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better or living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all know what a wreck I was.

"Now I am healthy, happy and hearty, and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies. You may publish this letter if you like. I think if more women used your remedies they would have better health."—Mrs. J. T. Cook, Lot No. 7, Cape Wolfe, P.E.I., Canada.

Because your case is a difficult one, and doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one.

It is a record of constant victory over the obstinacies of women—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

Buffalo Near Slave River

Three distinct herds of wild buffalo have been located west of the Slave river, on the extreme northern boundary of Alberta, by a party of cruisers under the direction of A. J. Bell, government agent at Fort Smith, sent out by the Dominion forestry department. Pierre Squirrel, chief of a tribe of northern Indians, who was guide for the party, estimates there are fully 200 animals in the herds. The buffalo resemble the American bison, from which they descended, but life in the hilly regions has made them more agile and fleet of foot. They travel in twos and threes in the summer, herding together in the winter for protection against the timber wolf, their natural enemy. It is announced here that the government will take steps at once to prevent the extermination of the herds by hunters and further protect the animals by increasing the wolf bounty. Harry V. Radford, an explorer, discovered a herd in the north two years ago.

A Big Crop

Harvesting operations are under way in various parts of central Alberta and within a week big batteries of cutting machines will be far flung in this district. Reports received by the department of agriculture and the board of trade, Edmonton, indicate that the grain crop throughout the province will be the largest ever gathered. Its farm value is placed at from $53,000,000 to $55,000,000, as compared with $51,000,000 in 1912. This is attributed to the increased acreage and larger acre yields. The three transcontinental railroads operating in this district have completed arrangements to supply sufficient equipment to move the crops without delay. Wholesale and retail houses throughout the province report increases in business in consequence of the big crop.

Buy it now. Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is almost certain to be needed before the summer is over. Buy it now and be prepared for such an emergency. For sale by all dealers.

Mrs. W. A. R. Kerr Drowned

Before scores of onlookers, Mrs. Kerr, wife of Professor W. A. R. Kerr, of Alberta University, Edmonton, was drowned at White Sand beach, Cooking Lake, on Sunday afternoon at 5.35. She was one of a party of five in a sail boat which capsized through being struck by a squall. All started to swim for the shore, which was a comparatively short distance away from where the accident happened, when Mrs. Kerr for some unknown reason sank, her body not yet having been recovered.

If you are a housewife you cannot reasonably hope to be healthy or beautiful by washing dishes, sweeping and doing housework all day, and crawling into bed dead tired at night. You must get out into the open air and sunlight. If you do this every day and keep your stomach and bowels in good order by taking Chamberlain's Tablets when needed, you should become both healthy and beautiful. For sale by all dealers.

Harry K. Thaw Escapes

Mattewan, N. Y., Aug. 18—Harry K. Thaw, the slayer of Stanford White escaped from the hospital for the criminal insane here at 7.45 o'clock yesterday morning. A dart for liberty through an open gate, a dash in the open door of a powerful automobile that stood on the outside and a flight like a rocket for the Connecticut state line, 30 miles away, accomplished his escape. Sunday night he was still at large, and the hospital authorities felt certain he was outside the state. Once beyond its boundaries, Thaw is free. Only months, perhaps years, of litigation, can bring him back to Mattewan, and then only in one event, that he be judged insane in the state to which he has fled.

Five confederates manned the car in which Thaw escaped, and a big black limousine which trailed it past the asylum gate. Police have their descriptions and the names under which they registered at a local hotel on Friday night, and are seeking them.

The hospital authorities believe Thaw has fled to the shore of Long Island Sound and boarded a yacht waiting with steam up, to rush him to Europe. $500 has been offered for his capture.

For soreness of the muscles, whether induced by violent exercise or injury, there is nothing better than Chamberlain's Liniment. This liniment also relieves rheumatic pains. For sale by all dealers.
